

FACULTY OF ARTS

CRIMINAL JUSTICE

The Criminal Justice program focuses on the study of social, cultural and governmental responses to crime. This includes a study of law making and lawbreaking and transgression, use of state power, including different dimensions of the police, courts, and corrections. The program explores issues of social justice, surveillance, law, socio-legal connections, offending, victims, and policy and practices found in institutions of justice.

Criminal Justice is an interdisciplinary social science degree that provides students with a strong grounding in critical thinking, writing, and research skills. Students who major in Criminal Justice examine conceptual and practical applications of justice, historical and contemporary explanations and responses to law making and enforcement, and current literature in interdisciplinary criminal justice research (including history, cultural studies, psychology, Indigenous studies etc). Students are challenged to think about what justice means and how justice is best achieved, the key issues confronting the criminal justice system, the (im)possibility of reform and arguments for abolition, and the ethical dilemmas facing the criminal justice system.

The program requires the completion of core courses (including the three “sample courses” described below). In addition, students may take courses in Anthropology, History, Indigenous Studies, Political Science, Psychology, Sociology, and Women’s and Gender Studies.

This program offers three Bachelor of Arts degree programs (3-year, 4-year, or Honours). Students taking a degree in another Major may choose to add a Minor in Criminal Justice as a secondary area of interest.

SAMPLE CAREERS

This degree is well suited to students who wish to work in numerous areas of criminal justice. This is a broad field and can include jobs with all levels of law enforcement; federal or provincial corrections; border services; social service provision; community support work; research analysis, government policy. Students can also go on to work with agencies that advocate for change and justice transformation. This program provides excellent background training for those seeking admission to law school. Students interested in graduate school in Criminal Justice or similar disciplines are encouraged to pursue an Honours degree in Criminal Justice.

SAMPLE COURSES

Introduction to Criminal Justice is a first-year course that surveys the criminal justice system past and present, focusing on three systems – police, prosecution, corrections, and examines important concepts and debates about criminal justice.

Research Methods in Criminal Justice is a second-year course that explores the principles, data sources, and research methods appropriate for criminal justice research.

Criminal Law is a second-year course that examines the nature, purpose, scope, sources, and basic principles of criminal law.

Experiential Learning: Students can apply for field placement and research field practicum courses after they have completed the required courses. Students are placed in a criminal justice, human service, or community service agency by the program coordinator.
