BACHELOR OF ARTS DEGREE WITH A MAJOR IN

MODERN LANGUAGES

AND LITERATURES

Overview

A second or third language can be used as primary or as auxiliary skills in a career. A major in French Studies, German Studies or Spanish Studies provides the skills sought after by numerous employers, such as the education system, government, the mass media (radio, television, newspapers), museums, the travel and tourism industry, as well as businesses or companies with overseas offices. With further education, students with a degree in French Studies, German Studies or Spanish Studies can go on to teach in primary, secondary, high schools, or in universities, or become translators and interpreters. In Canada, being bilingual in French and English provides an excellent advantage when applying for careers in the public sector.

“Studying French at the University of Winnipeg greatly enriched my undergraduate experience and has opened many doors for me since graduating. I had always dreamed of studying abroad in France, and the French Studies program allowed me to realize this dream. As the first student from UWinnipeg to study in Tours in 2016, and as a 20-year old in a foreign country, I never felt like I had to go it alone. The impacts of studying French are far-reaching and will likely stay with me for the rest of my life. This education has allowed me to meaningfully incorporate bilingualism into my day-to-day life despite being an Anglophone”.

- Rebecca Hume, French Studies graduate; M.A. graduate, Ryerson University, Toronto
