Note: RHET-3900-002 - A border/land is a physically and symbolically fascinating space. It can be one's home, commute, conflict, lifeline, opportunity, or identity. This course introduces a physical and symbolic concept of border/lands and examines how language, culture, and identity within borderlands shape interactions and power dynamics. It also examines the rhetoric regarding geopolitical conflicts and global migration, which provides students an opportunity to discuss the current global conflicts and their underlying factors. By exploring case studies and analyzing discourse surrounding borders, students will gain insights into the multifaceted dimensions of border dynamics, geopolitical tensions, and globally displaced populations.
